DEVELOPMENT: Roads, adits, open-stopess minor trenching, lots of prospecting locally, loading facility, remnants of a crushing and sorting mill..

ACTIVITY AT TIME OF EXAMINATION: None but some recent staking.

GEOLOGY: Permian metavolcanics to the east and granodiorite to the west, workings are mostly in the granodiorite and are associated with fairly large north trending quartz veins. Sample 2928 was from a small adit following a N10W vein that dips at no more than 10°W. The vein was an open-stope along the eastside of hill for approximately 200 feet. There was almost no visable mineralization other than fe-oxides. Sample 2929 was from an adit and incline near a millsite that explored several veins on a general N10W heading in granodiorite. Locally there are pods of black tourmaline adjacent to or near the contact zones. Much of the vein material is scattered along the mountain or brocken to various sizes in piles. The only visable mineralization in the veins associated with this site was minor pyrite...The road to this site was built by hand and the workings are very old..The hill side is scattered with several generations of claim post but there has not been mining done for a long time.
On the opposite side of the ridge there is a cabin built from railroad ties below an adit in dark gray granodiorite. The dump and associated with the adit has considerable copper mineralization in both oxides and sulfides with possible silver mineralization.
